DO YOU REMEMBER?

When there were two grocery stores in the downtown? Kroger was on Main Street; A&P on Third Street.

When you could walk down to the neighborhood stores to buy penny candy or a bottle of milk for your mom?
Fraley's at 10th and Water Streets; Guetzky's at 10th and Lincoln Streets; Mike's on Ridge Road (at Mike's curve); Shield's on 39th Ave.; Ksenak's on Wisconsin St. and Becky's on 8th Street at Wisconsin St.;Pavel's at Michigan & Home Ave; Wood's on Cleveland Ave., AND MANY OTHERS.

When there were four new car dealers in the downtown?
Christenson Chevrolet Motors; Heuring Ford and Storey's American Motors - both on Third Street; and Isakson Chrysler/Plymouth, still at Front and Center Streets.

When street cars ran down Third Street? Evidence of the tracks can still be seen at both ends of the parkway today.

FAMILIAR SHOP - This building at 3rd and Main Sts., shown in 1949, housed Dyche's Drug Store, a familiar landmark for many Hobart residents who frequented the old fashioned soda fountain. It later housed the Rexall Drugs, Vosberg's Dept. Store and the Men's Store, as well as the present occupant, the New Image Beauty Salon. Many residents caught the Gary Transit bus at this corner, making trips into Gary or the steel mills. (Hobart Hist. Soc. Photo)

THE OLD ALMA MATER - During the World War II days, Hobart students attended high school in the old Roosevelt Gym building (left) and the old Hobart High School. Roosevelt Gym was on New Street and the high school faced Fourth St. Today, the Hobart Middle School occupies both sites with several additions having been added through the years, connecting the structure into an L-shaped school. In the right photo; the right end of the building as shown was the "new" portion. It's now the "old", and only remaining portion of the building which now extends to the sidewalk. HOBART RIOT - Housewives rushed to stores during the war years when a rumor spread about the arrival of any item among those hard to find. Krogers, located on downtown Main Street, was the site for a riot when a load of laundry soap arrived. This scene is from the following day when Police Chief Frank Traeger was on hand to see that the ladies stood quietly in line to purchase the soap. If you recognize any of the ladies, the Hobart Historical Society would be interested in the information. In the lower photo, customers are seen inside Krogers during the episode. George Earle, an Englishman, moved the post office from the Liverpool area in 1847 to the present Hobart site. He purchased land from several speculaters who had purchased various portions from a Potawatami Indian, Ben Ack. Ack's Indian float included most of what is now downtown Hobart. In 1849, Earle platted the town, naming it for his brother, Hobart Earle. He dammed up Deep River, to form Lake George, and constructed a saw mill and a grist mill which were located at the present site of NBD Bank. Hobart remained a town until 1921 when it became a city.

NEW PARK THIS YEAR - Mary Jane and Gerald Rees stand on land designated for a 20-acre community park to be developed on 73rd Avenue, west of Grand Boulevard. Gerald and Mary Jane Rees donated a 56-acre tract of land to HIEDC with the stipulation that at least 20 acres be developed into a park. The site is in the annexed area of Ross Township. A park in that area is a requirement of the annexation. A portion ($200,000) of the first general obligation bonds ever issued by Hobart, will be used to develop the park which is expected to be completed this year with ball fields, playground, a roller blade hockey area, shelter, picnic area and sledding hill. A community building is to be added along 73rd Avenue, but isn't expected to be completed this year. (Times photo)
